

Jacquinn Sinclair

Jacquinn Sinclair is a Boston-area-based journalist, author, and poet. Currently, she's a contributing performing arts writer and theater critic for WBUR's The ARTery. Typically, her writing seeks to highlight creatives and organizations whose work is at the intersection of art and activism.

Jacquinn's stories and poems have been anthologized in "How We Take Up Space," featuring memories, stories, and poems on spatial justice, the International Women's Writing Guild's "Heels into the Soil: Stories & Poems Resisting the Silence" and "New Jersey Fan Club: Artists and Writers Celebrate the Garden State." She is a recent winner of the Dunamis Boston's Emerging Artist Fellowship, GrubStreet's Teaching Fellowship, and a Fine Arts Work Center and City of Boston scholarship winner for poetry. Jacquinn's writing has appeared in various publications, including The Boston Globe, Lonely Planet, American Theatre Magazine, and more.